This year's UW – Green Bay course offering:

“CREATIVE THINKING”

This workshop in creative thinking uses Henrik Ibsen's play, An Enemy of the People, as a platform for discussion. Participants will view a film of the play which will lay the foundation for the class. In the play, Ibsen pits four institutions of society against each other: business, government, media and science, and in doing so, creates a fascinating problem-solving setting. Participants will examine the dynamics of the major characters and work through solutions to what in the play became an impasse. An exciting approach to learning, the workshop offers new insights into ways to effectively move projects and communities forward. Problem solving, empathy and understanding yield communication and productive solutions.

This year's CPM course offering:

“WORKING WITH COUNCILS, BOARDS AND COMMISSIONS”

This workshop provides those who work with elected or appointed governing bodies a clearer understanding of the pressures, legal constraints and demands on the members of our council, boards and commissions. You will learn: the structures and processes necessary in these governing bodies, strategies to maintain good communication and minimize the challenges that can arise in the staff/board working relationship. Discover how you can help boards and commission become more effective in their official capacities and to make for a smoother, more productive organization.

PLEASE NOTE: Check (X) the course/education of your choice and remember, we need your email address when you register. Course materials will be sent to you via email.
